MEDIA RELEASE

REIDSVILLE-- Reidsville Police Chief Robert Hassell was sworn in as the newly elected President of the North Carolina Association of Chiefs of Police association during their annual conference January 23 – 26, 2016. The conference was hosted in Cherokee, NC and the new board of officers was sworn in at its annual banquet Tuesday evening.

"I am proud and honored to hold this position as President of the NCACP, and I pledge to continue to uphold our association's objectives to develop police leadership, to protect our officers, and to protect our communities," Chief Hassell said. "I am humbled by the trust given to me by my peers and mentors to lead this great association and group of law enforcement professionals."

The mission of the association is to collaborate with one another and to elevate the standards of the profession, while helping to advance overall police efficiency. This is as true today as it was in 1976 when the association was first organized.

"I am very proud of Chief Hassell," Reidsville Mayor Jay Donecker said. "Our city is also very proud that Robert has received this accolade, which recognizes him as a leader by his peers. We are very fortunate to have him here in Reidsville."
