Smith graduates from Municipal and County Administration course

The Reidsville City Council recognized Michelle Smith, Human Resources Analyst, during its May 7th regular monthly meeting for completing the 2018-19 Municipal and County Administration Course offered by the UNC School of Government.

Mayor Jay Donecker, on behalf of the Reidsville City Council, acknowledged Smith's completion of the course and presented her with a framed certificate.

This program is designed for managers, department heads, and officials whose responsibilities require a broad understanding of functions beyond individual areas of specialization. The course is approximately 150 hours in length, and more than 60 instructors participate in leading the program. Course instruction covers North Carolina local government law, organization and management, finance and budgeting, employment law and administration, planning and regulation of development, and the delivery of specific city or county services.

Smith was one of 94 officials who graduated the Municipal and County Administration course this year and is one of more than 3,200 officials who have completed the course since it began in 1954.

Smith began her career with the City of Reidsville in October of 1999, serving as the Deputy City Clerk. In September of 2005, she became the City's Customer Service Supervisor in the Finance Department, a position she held before assuming her current position in September of 2014.

Michelle Smith, Human Resources Analyst for the City of Reidsville, was recognized by Mayor Jay Donecker and Reidsville City Council at their May 7th meeting.
