

Toymakerz big reveal at Market Square Sunday

Have you ever wanted to watch a television show film an episode?

Then you can come out to Market Square this Sunday, July 17, in downtown Reidsville, from 1-5 p.m.

If you haven't heard already, the Velocity television network will be premiering a new show about the Reidsville-based company, Toymakerz. A press release by the Los Angeles production company, Lucky 13 Cinematic (L 13C) says the company and the show are about "unique toys for big boys." Line Producer Angela Carroll said the big reveal Sunday afternoon will be for a Camaro that Toymakerz has been customizing for one of the upcoming episodes.

The series began filming in April and has gotten out of the shop to use Reidsville's city streets and locals for the filming. Carroll said the series will premiere on September 16.

The show highlights the life and creations of David Ankin, owner and proprietor of the company, Toymakerz, Inc. Ankin is a former stunt man, motorcycle racer and custom vehicle fabricator, who will be joined by his righthand man and racecar fabricator, David Leavy. According to the press release, Leavy is well known for exceptional design and delivery of some of the best machines in the eighth and quarter mile. "Anyone looking for a motorized vehicle that is unmatched in its class calls on Toymakerz," the release states.
