Reidsville location to help company expand

An 113,500-square-foot facility in Reidsville is giving a waste management services company the opportunity to grow its business.

Stericycle, based in Lake Forest, Illinois since 1989, has transferred 12 jobs from its former 12,400-square-foot suite in Greensboro to its new Reidsville location at 211 Rockingham Drive. The site, near the intersection of U.S. 29 and N.C. 87, will also be convenient as the company seeks to grow its customer base and serve existing customers such as Procter & Gamble, which is only 12 miles from Stericycle's new Reidsville location.

“Stericycle not only needed additional space for its current operation but also is looking toward future growth,” said Mark Wells, Director of Business Development for the City of Reidsville. “As its business grows, the company will be able to expand at this location.”

Stericycle, with more than 600,000 customers globally, provides waste management solutions not only for Procter & Gamble but for hospitals, laboratories and physician practices. In Reidsville, the company will take defective, outdated or expired products and shred them. Those products with plastic casings are broken down, shredded and shipped out to other recyclers, according to Wells.
